H. J. Ford Passes

Editor and publisher of the Lacombe Globe since 1935, Harry J. Ford passed on suddenly on Wednesday evening last, following a heart attack after attending the Lacombe and district old-timer's reunion.

Mr. Ford, who was 64, had had a wide experience in the newspaper world, having formerly been business manager of the Calgary Alberta and the Regina Daily Star. He arrived in Alberta in 1907, and had many friends throughout the province.

Many interesting features were enjoyed in camp, including observing a sawing and planing mill in operation, learning to light fire by friction, the building of a monkey, or rope, bridge, and also a log bridge.

During the period the boys were in camp, they were given a tour of the Lewis Blair of Aldridge and Chuck Maclean, of Strathmore.

Next was a game between Rockyford Girls and Rockyford Juniors. The boys were defeated 8 to 7.

Rockyford Seniors defeated Bel-seller 6-2.

Between games races took place in the ball diamond, which delighted the younger folks.

UFWA Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Strathmore U. F. W. A. was held August 12th at Mrs. M. Downey's with 13 members and 2 visitors present. After the usual business and a short discussion on the garden, the president turned the meeting over to Mrs. C. T. Armstrong of Hussar, our director.

Mrs. Armstrong commended the club on its membership, its ways of raising money, and the willingness of each member to shoulder her share of responsibility. Then she emphasized the need of being organized and urged that a delegate be sent to the U. F. A. Convention in Calgary and also the one in January.

The question of Oleo Margarine was brought up and every hand went up opposed.

Plans for a "Get Together" with Standard, Hussar, Makepeace and Strathmore locals, to be held at the different towns, were discussed, and next week's meeting in favour, Mrs. Armstrong will discuss it with the other Locals and let us know the results.

Mrs. Armstrong then asked if there were any questions and offered her help in any way possible.

At the conclusion of her address President Laura Groves thanked Mrs. Armstrong for her most interesting talk and invited her to come again at any time.

During the social hour that followed, lunch was served by the hostesses for the day, Laura Groves and Hazel Risdon.

Next meeting is Sept. 9 at Hazel Watson's with Mrs. H. Risdon and Alice Risdon to serve lunch.

PREMIER MANNING'S VICTORY

Tuesday's election cannot possibly be regarded, we feel, as indicating anything other than the whole-hearted support of the Alberta people for the Manning administration. The huge majority obtained indicates approval of the government's policy throughout the length and breadth of the province, and the increase in support gained by the Social Credit party indicates that approval is even more general than it was four years ago, even though no seats have been gained.

It is an unqualified tribute that this government, which has held office for thirteen years already, should be returned so strongly by the people. It points, we feel, the correctness of the Calgary Albertan's statement in Thursday's editorial, when it suggested that Albertans had given their unqualified support to a government which had admittedly abandoned radical policies, and settled down to a policy of sane, reasonable government.

Here Comes the Groom

The Independent has published detailed reports of many weddings during the past three months and we hope to have many more before the summer is over, but we might point out, that in all these write ups the groom seems to be a minor factor in the proceedings. He is barely mentioned and the only allusion that is made regarding him, is that he is the gentleman who will marry the bride, and he is naturally called upon to reply to the toast to the bride.

We do not think this is giving the groom the prominence to which he is entitled, because after all, he is the party who will eventually "foot the bill." The wedding would not be possible unless he had a job or good prospects for future security. He has to follow his chosen occupation, day in and day out, to make the marriage a going concern and it is only fair that he be given some attention when the wedding is solemnized and when the description of the proceedings is published in the newspaper.

It is the groom with deep satisfaction that we were able to attend a wedding in the United Church recently and that we were invited for the purpose of acting as the reporter and giving a write-up that would do justice to all concerned.

On Tuesday, July 6th, at high noon, in the United Church, Stettler John Arthur Jones, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones of Erskine, became the husband of Catherine Luella Smith, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Smith of Gadsby, in a ceremony that was featured by the attendance of most of the pioneer families of the community. The parents of the contracting parties, settled in this district in 1902, and their families have grown up with the country. It might be mentioned that John Arthur Jones, familiarly known as Jack first met Catherine at a dance at Ingletton school and the acquaintance so happily initiated, soon ripened into love and understanding which was climaxed by the interesting ceremony of last Tuesday.

There were no bridesmaids for this auspicious event as it was felt that the presence of the groom was sufficient to lend eclat to the occasion. Rev. Mr. Archibald, now retired, who was the first active minister in the community in the early days, came down from Edmonton to perform the ceremony, and to give his blessing to the young people.

His parents he had known and ministered to as far back as forty-five years ago.

The groom, who led the bride into the church, with the strains of Wagner's wedding march, entitled "Here Comes The Groom" was attended by Mr. Harry Brown, the eligible bachelor of Botha, and as he approached the altar, which was heavily banked with lovely wild flowers of the prairie, he was the cynosure of all eyes, although those of his numerous lady friends in the audience seemed to flash with resentment instead of congratulations. He replied to the questions of the clergyman with a firm voice, as though he was determined to go through with the ceremony at all costs.

The groom was charmingly clad in a three-piece ensemble, consisting of coat, vest and pants. The coat of dark navy blue gabardine was draped around his shoulders in a streamlined fashion, and was tastefully gathered under his arms and extended part way to the wrists with a three-quarter sleeve effect.

A pretty though sentimental story was current after the wedding, that this coat had been worn by his grandfather and his father on their own wedding days. The vest was a sleeveless creation, meeting in front with a sheer redignate effect and it was gracefully fashioned with pockets on the sides, and was held together at the back with strap and buckle. Conspicuous on the front of the vest was the groom's favorite piece of jewelry, a fraternity pin, the gift of the Bible Institute at Three Hills, where he had been in attendance as a student. From the left hand pocket, and held in place by a safety pin was suspended a lovely Ingersoll watch, the gift of the bride, which shone with a dim white radiance and lent a touch of colour to a costume in perfect taste and harmony with the preceding gings.

The groom's pants or trousers were of dark worsted wool and were suspended from the waist falling sheer to the floor in a straight line, but the artistic simplicity of this garment was relieved by the right pantleg, which was caught up about four inches by a garter of dark blue revealing a fleeting glimpse of dark brown shoes of appropriate dimensions. Tied and held in place by cords of the same brown suede color.

Beneath the vest, which was worn more or less open, with a striking effect of careless abandon, the groom wore suspenders of dark blue attached fore and aft to the trousers and passing in a graceful line over the shoulders. These pretty accessories which were manifestly essential under the circumstances, might have passed unnoticed, had not the groomsmen, Harry Brown, muffled the ring, when passing it to the groom and when the groom stooped over to retrieve the erring circlet, the delicate blue of the suspenders was prettily revealed.

The groom's neck was encircled with a collarette, characterized by the delicate pearl tint of old fashioned celluloid, also handed down as an heirloom by his grandfather, who came to Lacombe in 1892, and around the collar was loosely knotted a cravat of dusky rose and a buttonhole of yellow metal was exposed underneath.

The groomsmen's costume harmonized with that of the groom in a complete and artistic blending of color and style but it was noticed that he had dispensed with suspenders but wore a sheer bodice of white cotton held together at the waist by a belt of leatherette ornamented by a medal of dusky gilt.

Neither the groom nor his best man, wore hats during the ceremony and as they stood at the altar, a murmur of admiration passed through the audience, while at intervals, above the murmur, could be heard the soft tones of the organ, as the organist interpreted the strains of "Because".

All of the star performers in this interesting and unique event, were of the male persuasion. The ushers, Messrs. John Brennen and John Benford, were assistants in their attentions to the guests, while during the signing of the register, Mr. Dave Driman sang "O Promise Me" with a Scotch accent. In the recreation room, where the wedding dinner was served to 140 guests, Mr. Sam Jones and Mr. Jim Smith, the fathers of the contracting parties, received the guests, and the toast to the bride was given by Mr. Les Lehr and replied to by the uncle of the bride, Mr. Harry Schilling.

As the bride led the groom from the sacred edifice and stood at the door to receive the congratulations of her friends, it was noted that she wore the conventional veil and carried delphinium blossoms, the gift of the groom, and before taking the waiting automobile, for a honeymoon at Warden Junction, the happy couple were enveloped in showers of confetti. The automobile was prettily decorated with streamers so that it did not require a sign at the rear "Just Married." The groom

In Others' Words

A Quiet Election

What the heck is the matter with the people of Alberta? In past elections this province has been wont to stage a "Knock down and drag out" battle. The present election campaign has been proceeding with an unprecedented placidity utterly unworthy of the wild and woolly spirit of this western province!

Perhaps it is because conditions are good in Alberta. People are prosperous and not interested in politics. For the benefit of such persons we quote from Goldsmith: "It fares the land, to hastening is a prey, When wealth accumulates, and men decay."

Raymond Recorder.

Attend Election Meetings

People have a curious outlook on politics these days. They'll attend their own party meetings, but not anybody else's. Maybe that's why there isn't fire in the oratory any more, why speakers labour over long rehearsed written speeches, and the cool old days of heckling are gone. It would be a good thing if more C. C. F. followers attended Liberal gatherings. Social Creditors C. C. F.

meetings, and vice versa. Most persons have a pretty good idea of their own party platform, but only hazy biased criticisms of their opponent's. Mix 'em up, and then use your judgment in selecting the party you think would give the best government. That's the only way to vote intelligently.

An 18 Cent Cow!

(From The Budget of July 7, 1932)

The Barhead News tells the following incident: Charles Boehler shipped a cow to the Edmonton stockyards and the transaction resulted as follows: weight 560 lbs.; price 75 cents per hundred pounds; value of cow $6.45. But Mr. Boehler did not get a cheque for $6.45. There were deductions as follows: insurance 30 cents; stockyard 79 cents; brand reading 10 cents; commission 90 cents; trucking $4.63; on cheque 15 cents, making a total of $6.27, which subtracted from $6.45 left 18 cents — the full amount received for the cow.

Mrs. T. B. Hughes has as a houseguest Mrs. Stevens, of Delburne, Alberta.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR THE HOME-MAKER

Have you an old metal-edged ruler lying about? Use it to cut oblong cookies. It keeps the edges trim and even.

Detach the record file from your old gramophone cabinet and put it between two shelves. Now file your pot lids and pie plates.

Put two or three layers of newspaper under your oilcloth for the kitchen table. See that it projects over the edges. The cracks that so soon appear, especially at the corners, are much longer delayed.

When making pancakes, don't grease your pan but rub well with plenty of salt when hot. Just one treatment should suffice for the batch. This prevents it from smoking and causing it to penetrate every corner of the house.

After putting dressing in a bowl, pin it up with safety pins instead of going through the bother of sewing it up.

HOW YOUR SUIT SHOULD FIT

Most women should not step into a ready-made suit without having it altered. The price of alterations is economy in the long run.

The tall, slim woman should choose a much longer jacket than the short, plump woman. It should also close higher and have wider revers. Low closing point, near waist, and long, narrow revers are necessary to lengthen and slenderize the large-all-over woman or the woman with big bust. This kind of suit, however, is definitely mature.

Double-breasted jackets are also unbecoming to heavy women. Patch pockets, other horizontal trimmings are not becoming to short women.

Hips must fit smoothly, neither too loosely nor too tightly.

Have your sleeves short enough to avoid wrinkles at the wrist. The plain, rather narrow skirt is only for the tall and slim. The woman of medium height and weight should wear a skirt with an easy flare. Bias cutting, six or eight gores, a group of pleats front and back—'til of these are good. But there should be the same amount of fullness in the back of the skirt as in the front, to achieve a slight and even ripple around the legs.

The collar must stick close to the neck when seen from the side. It must not rise in back too high for the length of your neck. Have shoulders well squared.

SALVAGED LIPSTICK

Is your bureau drawer cluttered with a number of empty lipstick cases? Dig the small amount left in these cases. Put these bits into a tin can Melt it on the stove. Wind one of the lipstick holders with waxed paper, then with dampened brown paper tape. This is to cover temporarily, the slot in the side in which the lever runs to raise and rub the lipstick. When the liquid has melted pour the paste into the holder. It hardens quickly, and soon the waxed paper and brown paper tape can be removed. Result? A new lipstick, and a cleaner drawer.

LEMON JUICE

Aluminumware may be cleaned with a cloth moistened with lemon juice. A good way to whiten bread or meat board which has become discolored is to rub them with lemon rinds turned inside out. Then with clean warm water.

Lemon juice added to water used in cooking cauliflower will keep it snowy white.

Use a mixture of lemon juice and salt to brighten copper vessels darkened by heat or fire. Rinse with tepid water.

To remove iodine stains from linens, rub the stained area with a slice of lemon.

When washing, put a piece of lemon peel in the drain pan. It will soften the water, remove all traces of the smell of fish, onions, etc. and put a fine gloss on china.

Heat lemons before extracting the juice and you will obtain almost twice the quantity.

Farming News

FARMING FOR THE FUTURE

How are you farming your land? This question demands serious consideration in these days of limited land resources and increasing population.

G. R. Sterling, Supervisor of Soil Conservation, Alberta Department of Agriculture, says that to conserve our soils we must learn to work with nature instead of against her. The principles of natural soil conservation must be followed and needless loss of moisture and plant food prevented. Cropping practices must be used that will restore fertility to the land. The man who is farming with a view to the future must make use of a planned rotation.

The essentials of a good rotation are suggested by Mr. Sterling as follows: It must restore fibre and grasses and legumes. It should be of such duration and of such a nature that it lends itself to other farming projects. A satisfactory rotation should include cereal or other cash crops.

SOIL TEST BEST FOR SOME ELEMENTS

The fertility of the soil on many Canadian farms has become badly reduced from constant cropping, says G. W. Michael, Associate Chief, Fertilizers, Plant Products Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Some soils may have become deficient in one or more of these lesser plant foods for certain crops, but before buying them either singly or in mixtures, the soil should be tested to determine whether any deficiency exists and whether there is a real need of applying them.

Nightingale

by Mrs. F. H.

On the evening of August 11th a group of friends and neighbors gathered at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Thor Larson for a house-warming. The evening passed quickly with chatting and playing bingo. Mrs. Larson served the lunch the visitors thoughtfully brought with them and all agreed it was a pleasant way to spend an evening.

There was a jolly crowd gathered at the Hall last Friday night to honor Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hamilton (nee Myrtle Stoodley). Edgard's Orchestra supplied music for a pep dance and the folks really stepped to it. Many beautiful flowers covered a nicely decorated table and added much to the festivities. Lunch was served at midnight, after which the table was cleared and covered with many lovely gifts. Mr. F. H. Hartman then made the presentation and both Norman and Myrtle expressed their deep appreciation for the gifts and the very nice party. "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung. Dancing lasted to an early hour and all voted it a really jolly party.

Quite a number of Nightingale's younger set attended the house-warming at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Logan last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Gladden have returned from their honeymoon in England. Reg was a welcome visit or here last week. He will be on duty with the Pool Elevator from now on.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Hamilton were guests last week of Mrs. Hamilton's parents Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Stoodley.

Hussar Notes

by Mrs. M. C. B.

The first load of grain (barley) was hauled in to Hussar on the 12th by William Kaiser to the U. G. G.—Arnold Law agent. The second was brought in by Gordon McIntosh on the 15th. Grain is ripening rapidly. Along the roads from Hussar north to Delburne the stands of wheat, rye, flax and all grains are simply wonderful. It is estimated that wheat will go 35 bushels per acre and up.

The worst dust storm of the year swept the country from Three Hills East to the River on Sunday. It was followed by a downpour of rain.

Namaka Notes

by Mrs. E. B.

The Namaka Community again this year catered to the Blackfoot Indian Stampede last Wednesday. The crowd was smaller this year due to the busy season. However a good sum was realized for the treasury.

Tuesday. After a short business meeting, Miss Norma Jean Hogg spoke on "Hobbies That Pay". She showed some very interesting articles—all of which can be made at home. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess assisted by Fairy Aitkens and Florence Wheeler.

The next meeting will be at Mrs. Alex Peterson's in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Son from Springfield, Ontario spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. H. Newell this week.

QUALITY HAY

For those farmers who want the best feed obtainable for their stock and know how to get it, haying time is here again.

J. E. Birdsall, Supervisor of Crop Improvement for the Alberta Department of Agriculture, says that a great deal of poor quality hay is fed each year simply because haying is delayed too long. This results in more bulk, but the stems are coarse and full of fibre and much of the valuable leaf material is lost. In the case of alfalfa the leaves make up about 50 per cent of the plant, and they contain a very high percentage of the proteins, minerals and vitamins which are the main food elements of forage crops.

The aim in handling hay should be to obtain a good yield, retain the leaves, and have a product that is as green in colour as possible. To do this, the hay must be cut at the right time. Alfalfa should be cut when one-tenth to one-half in bloom. Alsike and Alasko clover in full bloom, sweet clover in the bud stage and grasses in the early heading stage. With grass-legume mixtures, the hay should be cut when the legume is at the right stage.

Fast efficient haying methods are essential to the production of bright green hay. Only in the last two or three years have haying methods begun to fall in line with those used for harvesting other crops. To a great extent, power machinery is providing the answer to the old problem of getting the hay up before it is rained on. Power mowers, sweepers and sweetchoppers as well as portable power balers, if used with judgement, make it possible to handle large quantities of hay quickly and well. If the hay does get rained on, the side delivery rake is a valuable machine for turning the windrows with a minimum loss of leaf.

THE FIRST FALLOW OPERATION

(Lethbridge Experimental Station)
Summer-fallowing time is here again and with it comes the ever serious hazard of soil drifting. Of all the soil drift control measures, trash cover is the most effective. The first stroke on the summer-fallow can be the deciding factor as to whether or not there will be sufficient trash to provide year-round protection.

The blade type cultivator or the one-way disk are used extensively for the first stroke at the Dominion Experimental Station and on sub-stations throughout Southern Alberta. The depth of the operation is determined by what implement will be used for the second stroke. If it is planned to use a rod weeder the first operation should be about four inches deep so that the rod weeder will work properly.

When it is planned to follow the blade with a one-way or blade, the depth should be no deeper than required to do good work. This is also true when the one-way precedes the blade or one-way. The second stroke following the blade or one-way should be slightly deeper than the first stroke. Only in exceptional circumstances has the one-way disk been used for more than two operations.

Speed of operations is important in trash cover following. The blade cultivator does its best weed killing at high speeds and it is one of the few implements that does not bury too much trash at high speeds. Using a one-way disk or the duck-foot cultivator at speeds over three and a half miles usually results in much of the trash being buried, with the result that there is much less protection against wind erosion.

Long time records show that there is less wind during June and July than there is in the fall or early spring. In order to have sufficient protection throughout the year, it is essential to maintain a good trash cover that will carry through into the fall and spring.

DIRECTION OF LUGS ON IMPLEMENT TIRE

E. B. Martin, Extension Agricultural Engineer for the Alberta Department of Agriculture, advises of a very pertinent question that arose during the course of one of the Tillage Machinery Field Days, held this summer by the Alberta Department of Agriculture.

The question referred to the correct way to run the lug type rubber tire on the one-way disc power lift wheel. Some were of the opinion that the lugs should travel in a manner similar to those on a tractor tire. Others thought that the direction should be reversed on the power lift wheel with the lugs running the opposite way.

Mr. Martin says that the latter is correct — the lugs of the power lift wheel tire should run in the opposite direction to those on a tractor tire. He points out that in the case of the tractor, the power is transmitted from the axle through the wheel to the ground and the lugs are placed to give a maximum of traction with a minimum of slippage. In other words, the lugs point in the direction of travel. In the case of the power lift wheel, the ground is the source of power which is transmitted through the wheel to the power lift mechanism. The direction of force is reversed, and for that reason the tire should be placed on the power lift wheel with the lugs pointing away from the direction of travel.

BETTER BARBS

Barbed wire to be put on the market in the next few days will have a greater tensile strength by 35 per cent than the wartime grade.

Early in the war years the War-time Prices and Trade Board ordered a lighter weight wire to be manufactured in order to save steel for other purposes. This Order has been rescinded for some time but as steel remained in short supply the manufacturers did not return to pre-war standards.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

When we speak of men as being "successful" it is generally assumed that we are referring to large incomes and prominent positions. But, while these are signs of success, they are by no means its only yardsticks.

Actually, I believe any man is successful who uses his energies and talents to the best of his ability. His earnings may be modest. But if he tries to improve himself and his environment, if he is dependable, agreeable and helpful, if he cares for his family and their needs, he is truly important.

Show me a man with these qualities and I will be proud to claim his acquaintance.

The best objective, surely, is to strive for success in the broader sense of helping to make this a better world!

The world is better because of life insurance which has achieved success through meeting people's need for financial security. And it contributes to the betterment of the whole nation through investments in public works and vital industries which benefit every citizen.
